The Pitfalls of Poor Project Tracking

When you have multiple projects in the pipeline, it's often difficult to know exactly which projects are running smoothly, and which ones are not. Late and inaccurate project time and cost data can keep you from getting the visibility you need to make course corrections and align project goals with business objectives. Without a holistic view of project status across the organization, senior management cannot make effective business decisions.

Real-time, centralized data about where time is spent helps you to account for and analyze project costs, so you can fine-tune project management and make necessary changes before you get off track.

Gain Full Visibility into Project Time and Costs

Replicon TimeCost is a cloud-based solution that offers a hassle-free way to track up-to-the-minute time and cost data for all projects. Whether you need to track costs for general project management or have specialized needs like capitalizing labor expenses, tracking R&D tax credits, managing grants, or calculating chargebacks in a shared services environment, TimeCost provides an easy-to-use solution to get full visibility into your project costs.
